WIRES OF DICTAGRAPH LED TO WIFE'S ROOM

Mrs. Carman Able to Hear Faintest Sounds Made in Physician's Office.

HOME IS CLOSELY GUARDED

Startling Discovery Made by Police in Connection With Mysterious Death of Mrs. Louise Bailey at Freeport.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Freeport, N. Y., July 1.—Investigation to-day of the mysterious death by shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman last night led to the startling discovery that a dictagraph had been installed in the physician's office, with a concealed wire leading upstairs to the bed chamber of Mrs. Carman, and that on Thursday last Mrs. Carman had obtained additional batteries in order that the delicate instruments might be so finely adjusted as to transmit clearly the faintest sounds from the physician's office.

The mystery of the fatal shooting of Mrs. Bailey had seemed to be beyond solution when this startling discovery was made. It was followed by extraordinary activity on the part of the county authorities, and a man home was immediately surrounded by a cordon of police and detectives, no one being permitted to enter or leave without consent of the authorities.

SENSATIONAL STORY OF INSTALLING WIRE.

The story of Mrs. Carman's negotiations for the installation of the dictagraph was most sensational. It was told by Gaston Boissonnault, manager of the dictagraph department of New York City. He said Mrs. Carman had come to his office on May 15 last, and after some verbal fencing had admitted that her reason for wishing to have one of these instruments installed was that she wished to overhear the conversation of her husband with his women patients.

"I don't want to get a divorce," she said. "I simply want to overhear what he says to women. I have a young child whose name I must protect."

She went on to explain that she believed her husband was too friendly with a woman he sometimes employed as a nurse, and that she had seen him kissing this woman and had disturbed them by knocking at a window. The police detective and his men placed behind a book-case in the physician's office while he was away on an automobile trip, taken at his office suggestion. Last Thursday Mrs. Carman had asked for information as to how the machine might be so adjusted as to transmit whispered conversations. Most of the conversations between the doctor and his women patients she said was in whispers. She was supplied with more batteries for this purpose.

BULLET DEFLECTED BY INSTRUMENT CASE.

Whether or not the shot which killed Mrs. Bailey was intended for her or for Dr. Carman is still a mystery. The police believe that the instrument case, which the bullet struck, deflected it from the course it would otherwise have taken.

Through all the questioning to which he has been subjected, Dr. Carman has steadfastly maintained that he has no recollection of ever having seen Mrs. Bailey before she visited his office on Monday evening to request a prescription for malaria. Mrs. Carman's mother of the slain woman, says her daughter had been suffering from malaria for the past few weeks.

No arrests had been made late tonight in connection with the murder of Mrs. Bailey. Sheriff Stephen Pettit said that Dr. Carman, when questioned about the instrument device, told him his wife admitted to him that she had the machine put in.

In her talk with the sheriff, Mrs. Carman denied ever having seen Mrs. Bailey. Dr. Carman also was the subject of close questioning concerning occurrences in and about the house before the mysterious hand with a revolver telephoned to the grand jury. He was window-pane and a shot through the broken window-pane and a shot through the window-pane and a shot through the window-pane.

A story in circulation to-day was to the effect that persons passing the physician's residence at the time of the murder saw a woman run across the lawn immediately after the shot was fired.

ROADS TO ABSORB SWITCHING CHARGE

tion of the same policy by the Southern carriers that the complainants sought. The evolution through which the Richmond switching business has passed during the last several years presents a variety of practices differing frequently with each carrier. The principles employed, however, resolve themselves into two general divisions, the trunk line and the Southern. The theory common to both principles is that connecting-line switching will be absorbed on competitive traffic, but the diversity of practice has been and is due to the sundry interpretations given the word "competitive."

Commissioner McCord, in reviewing the heterogeneous practices in vogue at Richmond, all of which the railroads adhere to, said to make some definite pronouncement that may be regarded as a criterion, to the end that uniformity may obtain. The practice of absorbing all switching charges on competitive traffic must be both reasonable and nondiscriminatory. We have found that the refusal of the railroads to absorb switching charges on competitive traffic is not only unreasonable but also discriminatory. The refusal of the railroads to absorb switching charges on competitive traffic is not only unreasonable but also discriminatory. The refusal of the railroads to absorb switching charges on competitive traffic is not only unreasonable but also discriminatory.

LOCAL PLANTS HAVE SUFFERED MATERIALLY

Local plants located either on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac or the Chesapeake and Ohio Roads have suffered materially. It is claimed, from the switching charges which have been made by the railroads, as such concerns have worked under a distinct disadvantage because neither of the railroads mentioned carries Richmond's natural selling territory—the South. To deliver their products, such plants have been compelled to load on their own sidings and then have their cars transferred to one of the three lines penetrating the South, the operation entailing a switching charge of 12 cents a car.

Old tariff regulation, no competition existed between, for example, the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Southern in the case of freight destined to Charlotte or to other points on the Southern system.

To take a concrete example, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad has been absorbing the switching charge only to them by knocking out the switching points at which it is in competition with other roads having Richmond terminal also. The same practice has been in vogue in the case of "trap cars" and "station order cars," both of which play important parts in local shipping. The practice of imposing the switching charges, against which the chamber entered protest, has been in force since November, 1902, the exception of a few months, during which the Seaboard Air Line withdrew the charge. Prior to 1903, all five of the roads figuring in the decision were assumed to be in competition with each other in Richmond, and hence no switching charges were imposed.

Hearings on the petition of the Chamber of Commerce seeking to have the railroads ordered to absorb the charges made for switching interstate carload freight locally, were conducted in Richmond May 8 and 9, 1912, before Special Examiner George P. Boyle, of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Argument on the petition was made in Washington before the Interstate Commerce Commission on November 16, 1912.

GOVERNOR IS ORATOR AT SOUTH BOSTON MEETING

Boys' Corn Club Has Annual Celebration of South Boston and Halifax.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] South Boston, Va., July 1.—This was a big day for South Boston, a day of July celebration. There were so many other engagements booked for the Fourth, that South Boston and old Halifax had to unite in celebrating to-day the annual Boys' Corn Club picnic. Early in the morning crowds began to gather from all parts of the surrounding counties, some coming in by rail, others wagons, buggies and many in automobiles. At the head of Main Street 200 Halifax Corn Club boys gathered and formed in line, headed by a brass band. They marched to the Southern depot, where a number of prominent speakers were met. The scene of festivities was at the Fair Grounds, Governor Henry C. Stuart being the orator of the occasion. He arrived in South Boston at 10:15 o'clock last night, and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stebbins while here. The Governor spoke along lines of farming, being thoroughly familiar with the subject, having had much experience as a farmer himself.

Others from a distance who made short and helpful talks were T. O. Sandy, State agent of demonstration work; Southall Farrar, assistant; I. C. Hill, Department of Agriculture at Washington. Special dinner was served to the boys. The success of the day's program was largely due to the efforts of W. W. Wilkins, county demonstration agent, and his assistant, E. B. Keeley.
